The Franklin County Historical Society was founded in 1968 to promote appreciation for our region's remarkable cultural heritage. The society's museum is located in Pasco, Washington's historic Carnegie Library which was constructed in 1911 as one of some 3,500 libraries established by Pittsburgh philanthropist Andrew Carnegie. Fewer than a dozen original Carnegie structures remain in Washington, and the society's museum is a rare example of one that features the original Spanish Colonial style architecture with terra cotta roof, high ceilings, wood trim, and other period features.

From the beginning, society members led by its first director Walter Oberst sought documents, books, and manuscripts related to regional history as well as artifacts and other material culture items for preservation and educational displays. Among the first archival accessions was an extensive collection of papers and area Indian antiquities donated by one of Pasco's most influential founders, entrepreneur and steamboat captain William H. Gray. His father, Rev. W. H. Gray, was a lay member of the famed 1830s Whitman-Spalding missionary group and also a prime-mover in the establishment of a provisional government in the Oregon Country.

Mr. Oberst also served as founding editor of the society's flagship journal, The Franklin Flyer, with the capable editorial assistance of his wife, Mary, and a team of researchers and contributors including Jim Rabideau, Mary Horrigan Gallant, LaDona Madison, and other founding members. In over fifty years of continuous publication, the Flyer has featured hundreds of articles by local historians on a wide range of topics from Native Americans and Inland Northwest pioneering to modern regional development. Flyer articles and the archival and photograph collections are especially rich for documentation of the 1940s-1960s Columbia Basin Reclamation Project, regional agricultural development, the vital roles served during and after World War II by Pasco's Naval Air Station and the Army Reconsignment and Holding Facility ("Big Pasco"), and life in Pasco and the Tri-Cities, Connell, Mesa, Eltopia, Kahlotus, Basin City, and other area rural communities.

This index was made possible by a dedicated team of society volunteers listed above and will be continuously updated to reflect ongoing accessions. Work is also underway to include similar guides for the museum's extensive photograph and map collections. The society continues to solicit articles for the Flyer and archival materials relevant to area history and culture.
